THE GORKY INCIDENT

A few weeks ago M. Gorky, one of the foremost novelists of Russia, came to New York to speak on behalf of his oppressed countrymen.

He was received with open arms in New York and stirred up a strong feeling in behalf of the downtrodden subjects of the Czar until it was discovered that Mme. Andreieva, a famous Russian actress, who was his travelling companion was not his wife as had been supposed. The young man who was with them was not related to either but had been adopted by them as a son.

The relations which had for years existed between the couple in Russia was well known to everybody there and had in no way affected their social standing. In New York however it as different and they were bounced out of four leading hotels in one week.

At once the feeling in favor of oppressed Russia was a thing of the past, although, the connection between Gorkys mode of living and the manner of killing and torturing women and children by Cossocks was difficult to figure.

It looks as if some people who were being called on to help the striving and oppressed had suddenly discovered a convenient way of gracefully side stepping the financial phase of the question.

The selection of Gorky, as mouth-piece for the liberty loving people of his country, might have been unfortunate, but no broad minded person will steel his heart to the sufferings of the Czars subjects because Gorkys morals are not up to the high standard set in New York.

The following item from the New York Journal however would seem to indicate that there has been a change of feeling toward one of the pair at any rate:

Mms. Andreieva, the Russian actress who was introduced as the wife of Maxime Gorky, was the guest of honor at a gathering of Barnard girls in the home of Professor John Dewey of Columbia University, on Riverside Drive.

To meet the actress there were asked about twenty-five of the college girls who were known to be interested in the cause of Russian freedom. Mme. Andreieva was escorted to the house by Mrs. John Martin, at whose home in Tompkinsville she has been staying.

The actress gave a reception and received a warm greeting from the girls, who were charmed with her spirit. Mme. Andreieva seemed greatly pleased.

Pin Headed Senators

The California Senators, who fought Senator Newlands' plan of inducing the Government to aid San Francisco by a loan, show that they are eminently pin headed and too small for the high places they hold.

Their main idea of opposing the scheme was that it was too big for them to comprehend and possibly because they were not first consulted.

The people of San Francisco consumed seven thousand tons of food in ten days, furnished by relief committees from different sections of the country.

The Arizona mine at Unionville, Humboldt county, which has a billion producing record of $8,000,000, is being reopened by a strong company.
